

ABSTRACT

The availability of land for residence is inversely proportional to the growing of human population. These lack of land has been considered a problem for some people, especially to fulfill their needs for daily activities in the living room in order to create a comfortable dwelling. In addition to the large size, the living room furniture is also did not always used. The product is only used when needed or when the guests come visit to the house. If no one is coming, the product will not be used and just use up the land. Though the room can be used for other activities that are more useful. The living room furniture design that can be used only as needed is the right solution for this problem. The novelty value of the furniture design is in the system used, which is modular or moveable to make the product flexible and easy to operate. Especially when the product must be arranged in such a way when not in use or when there are no activities in the living room, so the room will look more spacious.
