

ABSTRACT

The rate of urbanization to urban areas in Indonesia will continue to increase. Jakarta as a business and economic center is the choice for immigrants from all over Indonesia, so that people in Jakarta live side by side with different cultures. The Jakarta area is inhabited by various tribes, and the Javanese are the largest ethnic group. This makes the Javanese people in the Jakarta area live in a heterogeneous community environment that cannot present their original cultural identity in the surrounding environment. This design aims to present a local cultural identity in modern residential housing and a form of preserving local culture. The method of creating works uses two stages, namely first to dig up information from literacy data, interviews to get kitchen layouts, and selected ornaments. Second, the design process by developing sketches, working drawings and 3D modeling. The final result of this research is a scaled prototype consisting of a full height cabinet, wall cabinet, bottom cabinet and island.
