ABSTRACT

The number of cases of violence against women in Indonesia in 2021 increase by around 50% from the previous year. This problem should not be underestimated by the community and the government. The strong patriarchal culture is one of the reasons why violence against women occurs. As a result, more and more people are arbitrarily to women. The victims also chose not to speak up about the problems they experienced for fear of being criticized by the community. The aim of this research is to design an application that can help women who experience violence of any kind. The methods used to collect data in this study include making observations, making and distributing questionnaires, conducting interviews with experts and conducting literature studies related to the problems studied. The result of this research will be the design of an anti-violence application against women. With this application, it is hoped that it can help women who experience violence in Indonesia.
