

ABSTRACT

This study is entitled, "The Role of Family Communication in Insecure Adolescents in Bandung City." This study aims to determine the role of family communication in adolescents who experience insecurity and how to overcome it. The research method used is a qualitative approach. And this study was conducted through critical/descriptive analysis involving data/fact collection and in-depth study of the material to gain a deep understanding of insecure behavior in adolescents in Bandung City. The subjects in this study refer to individuals who are the source of data and information in a study. The object of research refers to the entity being studied or analyzed. The results of this study indicate that the role of communication in the family is significant. However, besides being important, parents must be able to choose and apply which communication pattern is best for their children. From the study results, the democratic communication pattern is the best communication pattern applied in family communication.

Keywords: Family communication, adolescents, insecure