

ABSTRACT

The Music Arts Student Activity Unit (UKM Seni Musik) of Telkom University Purwokerto is an on-campus organization focused on music, consisting of forty-three students divided into several interest groups such as guitar, bass guitar, piano, and drums, with drums being one of the most popular. Based on a questionnaire distributed to members and interviews with the head of the music division, several issues were identified in the current learning system, including the lack of adequate and high-quality learning materials, limited access to instructors, and difficulties faced by beginners in learning to play drums. Therefore, this study was conducted to provide an accessible educational platform offering structured and interactive learning materials. The project involved analyzing user needs, developing video-based learning content, modules, and a discussion forum to facilitate user interaction. User Acceptance Testing (UAT) results showed an average score of 87.72%, indicating that the system successfully met user needs and expectations.
